Church asks bingo legalization, police chief expresses concern

Should legalized bingo by nonprofit organizations be allowed in the city of Upland?

The Upland City Council heard a request Monday night for the fund raising game and some concerns expressed by Upland Police Chief Coy Estes.

The council directed Estes and City Attorney Donald Maroney to draft a model ordinance for consideration at its meeting Feb. 6 when the question comes up again.

Council members said that if problems mentioned by Estes can be worked out they may set the ordinance for formal public hearing

Paul J. Soltis, president of St. Joseph's School on Campus Avenue, requested the game be allowed to District appoints

new administrator

The Upland Elementary School District last week appointed a new assistant superintendent of business

Dr. Rollo May - a former assistant superintendent with the Magnolia School District in Anaheim - will leave his job in real estate investment sales and administration with Walker and Lee Inc. in Anaheim to assume the post.

He replaces Glenn Hardy, who resigned as of the beginning of January to take a similar business administrative position with the Fountain Valley School District.

May's annual salary will be $30,944 through June 1979.

"help offset spiraling costs" facing the parochial school.

Funds could also be used toward building St. Joseph's Church facilities at 877 N. Campus Ave., Soltis said.

He told the council a recent state Supreme Court decision ruling most state aid to parochial schools unconstitutional forces St. Joseph's to look elsewhere for revenue.

Soltis said about 380 full - time students, from 208 families, attend the school and that if tuition costs continue to skyrocket they could be forced into public schools.

Another 1,200 children, from at least 750 families, attend St. Joseph's classes in addition to their public school education, according

He said the parent - teacher group planned to use off - duty Upland policemen to act as paid security guards at the bingo sessions.

He noted the 1975 state ballot measure giving local governments the option of permitting bingo by nonprofit groups passed in Upland and surrounding cities.

Estes opposed a bingo ordinance for the city, saying the game would require police time to investigate the background of persons involved and make on - site inspections. The police chief said he "could live with" the initial 1976 state law passed after the successful iniative. However, he noted the state legislature expanded the definition of nonprofit organizations last July to include such groups as "labor groups, business leagues, real estate boards, boards of trade, civic leagues and organizations, local employee associations and fraternal organizations.

"And the list goes on and on," he

Without mentioning Pomona by name, Estes noted, "When we look at a situation in a neighboring city

(where the organization) is grossing $80,000 - $100,000 a month from the bingo operation - they're running six nights a week and they attract as many as 300 participants nightly - I certainly see a police problem from that standpoint.'

He said he did not believe the voters intended for that type of operation to be allowed.

During a council break, Estes said the city of Pomona has amended its ordinance to limit bingo games to one night a week, which is reportedly driving the high revenue operation out of business.

However, he told the council that a Superior Court ruling permitting Pomona to limit the frequency of games could be appealed.

He noted police would have to inspect organization books in addition to on - site inspections. Maroney told the council it could not discriminate among the groups considered non-profit under the state law. However, he said controls - such as limiting games to one night a week - could be enacted by Estes said one or two organizations sponsoring bingo would cause little problem, but the list of nonprofit groups includes many diverse organizations.

Maroney said that while background information may be obtained on the applicants for a bingo permit, they could not be excluded from running the games if they were affiliated with the nonprofit groups.

Councilman Hal Bailin said, "One of the big problems in this kind of thing is the mail - order minister who opens a store - front bingo parlor as the sole part of the religion.

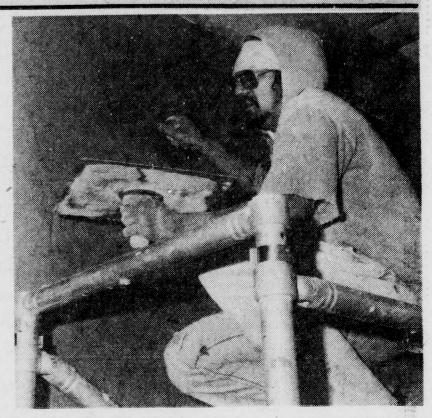

Estes said the city could deny permits to persons convicted of a gambling offense.

He also noted the law limits bingo prizes to $250 in any one game.

Mayor Pro Tem John McCarthy, a retired Upland police captain, said that if Estes, after working with Maroney, "still feels that the ordinance doesn't have the teeth in it" for proper enforcement, he would oppose bingo.

Other council members seemed to agree with McCarthy

When the City Council considered bingo at its April 4, 1977, meeting, no representatives of community groups spoke in favor of allowing the Joint sponsorship of Karate class possible solution for insurance lack Recreation Director Fred Taunton told the Upland City Council Monday night no insurance is available to reinstate a karate class canceled at the beginning of the year.

However, Taunton explained that while no insurance carrier would provide liability coverage for the city to continue the class, he hopes to work out an arrangement with Chaffey College Adult Education for

The Recreation Department canceled the karate class, which met Tuesday and Thursday evenings at Magnolia Recreation Center, after Taunton learned Dec. 30 that none of Upland's insurance companies would provide coverage during 1978 While Upland has adopted a program of largely self - insurance, carriers share the risk in cases of individual claims against the city over $75,000 or total claims amounting to more than $300,000 during the year.

After the meeting, Taunton noted that as a state school Chaffey College is in a better position to assume any liability risk stemming

Taunton said John Santiago, who

In other action Monday night, the City Council approved a request to match some $1,600 with city funds to help the Upland Kiwanis Club resurface the site of a former skating rink at Upland Memorial

Dr. Lyle Asay of the Kiwanis Club said the money will be used to put asphalt, or perhaps concrete, over the old rink surface for basketball, volleyball and badminton courts.

College Jazz Ensemble plans Swiss trip

Members of the Chaffey College notes will carry to Switzerland this

The group is one of three college jazz bands in the United States to be invited to play at Montreaux Jazz Festival in July

Jack Mason, instrumental music director for the college, said the band plans to spend 12 or 13 days in Swiss cities and small villages.

The 17 band members will pay half fare and earn most of the rest of the $22,000 for the trip through fund - raising dances and concerts, he

Mason said the invitation is an additional honor for the jazz program at Chaffey College, already recognized as among the top colleges for jazz on the West Coast. He noted the community college draws about half its jazz musicians from the West End, with others traveling from as far away as the San Diego area, Washington state and Vancouver, British Columbia.

Out - of - state residents pay $27 per course unit, or $810 for 30 units during the academic year. Students 18 years and older from other states are considered California residents after the first year, but foreign nationals are not.

Mason, who began the jazz program at Chaffey in 1967, said the two - year program offered by the community college presents "immense" problems because of the rapid turnover.

Yet, the jazz band rates with the best of those at four - year colleges and universities.

Mason said Chaffey attracts quality students because the school offers them opportunities they could not get in their first two years at other schools. He explained that first - rate players may start off in the No. 1

A freshman enrolling at California State University, Long Beach which Mason described as also havyears in the No. 2 or No. 3 bands, even if the student is a top musician.

he said. Chaffey added its third jazz ensemble this school year after having just formed the second band the previous year. About 80 students are in the program

Mason said that as students continue to enroll, a fourth jazz ensemble will probably be added next

States, Mason recruits talent when he hears it. In addition to brochures describing the school and its jazz program, he hands out impressive albums cut

The band is rehearsing for its third album - to be called "Imagination Flight" - in three years. The albums feature original by ensemble No. 1.

Mason and two of his former students, Charles Argersinger and Glenn Garrett, have provided compositions for the albums.

While class sessions totaling four hours are held Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, Mason pointed out student sectional leaders lead many hours of rehearsal by four or five musicians He said the five - member saxophone section will practice 75 hours before the new album is cut. Jazz ensemble No. 1 includes four trumpets, four trombones, five saxophones and a rhythm section of four students. During rehearsal last week of the title song "Imagination Flight," the saxophonists showed versatility substituting flutes and clarinets for their usual instrument.

Mason said the band's style is 'fashioned after the big jazz bands' of Woody Herman, Count Basie, Stan Kenton and Buddy Rich.

He added, however, that the band is not a copy of any other group and said that because the band plays a lot of original material, it "reflects the latest stylist ideas in the in-

The director said jazz students graduating from Chaffey College are in demand at four - year schools.

Mason explained that most students beginning in the Chaffey program received their experience from high school bands, which he noted are not usually jazz bands. He said about 10 members of the band will transfer to other colleges as

Others represent a diversity of majors and interests. Mason said the young musicians are encouraged to play in concert bands and orchestras and take private lessons, as well as continuing general education studies at Chaffey music majors.

Mason said, "We try to instill the idea of excellence as most important, whatever they become.

Jazz ensemble No. 1 took first at the California State University, Fresno, jazz festival and second place out of more than 100 college bands from four states at University of California, Berkeley, festival in Five competition performances are scheduled for this year, in addition to the Switzerland trip. The jazz ensembles held a benefit concert Dec. 6 at Upland High School to help raise funds, and Mason said a second concert which would also include guest performers - has been tentatively scheduled for March 15 at Gardiner Spring Auditorium at Chaffey High School in Ontario.

He noted the band also raised money by playing dances Christmas and New Year's Eve for business and community groups Insulate.

As they taught in school, heat rises. It still does. So when you heat your home, heat the rooms you live in. Not the Insulating your attic is much the same as closing a thermos of coffee. It keeps the contents warm.

It's a simple job. You can even do it vourself. Just a matter of putting in a layer of insulation that keeps the heat down where it belongs.

Inexpensive, too. The dollars you pay out will come back in the savings on your heating bills.

Supervisors to study ballot initiative to limit property tax

By PETER WONG Expressing concern Monday about how a ballot initiative to limit property taxes would affect the financing of Bernardino County government, the board of supervisors requested a study of the measure's impact.

The supervisors did not take a formal stand against the measure, which would amend the state Constitution and limit property taxes to one percent of a home's market value. But it was clear they were worried about its passage.

"It's very difficult for me to venture an opinion (on the initiative) other than generalities but I think we should know beforehand what we'd be called upon to do" if the measure is approved by the state's voters, Supervisor James L. Mayfield said.

The initiative is expected to qualify for the June 6 primary ballot, since 1.2 million signatures were received on petitions, more than twice as many as required. Its chief sponsor is Howard Jarvis, chairman of the United Organization of Taxpayers.

Local governments - counties, cities, schools and special districts - would be most directly affected by the measure's passage, since the property tax is their largest single source of revenue.

County Administrative Officer Earl Goodwin told the supervisors he would try to present a report on the initiative's impact by early next

Goodwin said his staff was also examining various proposals for property tax relief pending in the

Mayfield said that if the initiative were to pass, it would significantly affect the financing of county government, but in different ways.

For example, he noted, law enforcement and the courts are financed almost entirely from local property taxes, "so obviously, the greatest impact would be on law enforcement.

Slightly under 20 percent of the $300 million county budget is spent for the operation of the sheriff's department, the district attorney's and public defender's offices, the courts and the probation

Wide range of topics

On the other hand, Mayfield said, the initiative's impact "perhaps would be most minimal" on the county's healt and welfare programs, which account for nearly half the county budget.

Chairman Robert O. Townsend, noting that school districts account for half of all property taxes, said, "I wonder what will happen to our education system not only in this county but up and down this state (if the initiative passes).'

Heart Association speakers available

The San Bernardino County Heart Association has speakers from all walks of life to give stimulating discussions on heart disease, high blood pressure, diets, exercise, CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) training, smoking, and what the Heart Association is doing in the county.

Qualified speakers range from businessmen like Aaron Katz, who has served with the Heart Association for more than 15 years and possesses a wealth of information about the association's activities and services; nurses like Tish Patterson who talk about the importance of CPR, the life - saving technique; physicians with special interests in heart disease, the circulatory system and risk factors involving in heart attacks and strokes; and Leona Aronoff who is fund raising chairman and organizes the annual Cyclethon, said an association spokesman.

Films and literature are also provided free of charge.

Olin Habegger is the volunteer board chairman, and Miriam Stump is the San Bernardino County coordinator, Human Resources Agency, Office on Aging.

The council has representatives from Los Serranos, Chino, Montclair, Ontario, Upland, Alta Loma, Etiwanda, Cucamonga and Guasti. The council was set up so that one council member represents 3.000 senior citizens, men and women 55 years of age or older. All board members are volunteers.

Election of council members was held at a general meeting for Council meetings are held the first Thursday of each month at 9 a.m. in the West End Multi-Service Center, 316 W. B St., Ontario.

Habegger said the meetings are open to all seniors, not just council members. "We need the input from all seniors," he said

The $20,000 grant is to be used by June of this year, then another $20,000 will be put into the council's treasury for the June, 1978, to June, 1979, year.

This money, Habegger said, could be spent in many ways, and it is the council's job to find out what the various needs are. As an example, one nutrition center may need a new bus, or a taxi program might be coordinated. "We won't know where the money will be spent until we know the needs," Habegger said. The next board meeting is Feb. 2.

West Valley board members and the areas they represent are as follows: Habegger, Alta Loma; Jack Salyer, vice chairman, Los Serranos; Abby Reynolds, treasurer, Ontario; Dorothea Yurtz, secretary, Montclair; Angel Martinez, Chino; Juanita Navarro and Charles Workman, Ontario; Belvie Bateman, Upland; John Burks, Etiwanda; and Enrique Vasquez, Cucamonga and Guasti.

In the written policy for the Regional Councils on Aging, of which there are seven in San Bernardino County, it states, "The purpose of the Regional Councils on Aging shall be to move the decisionmaking regarding senior citizen's programming to the local level."

Students with problems, he explains, should take the matter to their student council which will relay messages to Wolf.

An advocate of the March 7 bond election in the Chaffey district, Wolf says its failure would cause numerous problems for students, especially those attending Alta Loma High School Wolf will work for the passage of the bond and is currently considering forming a student committee to support the measure.

The representative feels students have come a long way at gaining the attention of administrators and the community over the past few years. "Not only are we (students)

Explorers have trained search and rescue team

Explorer Scout Post 359, sponsored by the Ontario Firefighters Association, has the only official Explorer Search and Rescue team in Southern California and one of only three on the West Coast.

The search and rescue team, which currently has a roster of 15 members (half of the post), received final certification Sept. 24 after a three-year training and preparation period.

The group is now recognized by the National Mountain Rescue Association in Washington and Oregon, most of the other national and state agencies in charge of search and rescue, and the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Office, the agency primarily responsible for rescue operations in the county.

Wes Podboy is one of the original members of the local team and was one of four Explorers responsible for bringing the program to Ontario.

"After about six months in the post, we were looking for a program that the Explorers could take on," Podboy, a scout since he was 8, said.

"We read about this ESAR program in Seattle and sent for the information. We learned about the instructor training course up there. Four of us took the seven-day course, which ran about 15 hours a day," he said.

In Seattle, where the program originated, there are over 300 field-qualified scouts, Podboy noted. The scouts act as the official search and rescue unit for King County and have been called on by the state on several occasions when rescues spanned a long period of time or the manpower need was extensive.

The Seattle team has a truck valued at $24,000, fully equipped with photocopying gear, radios, tools and materials for all possible types of logistical work or mapmaking, Podboy explained.

Much of the training for the program is tedious and time-consuming, involving mapmaking, plotting, navigation and compass work, the scout said.

The local post conducts training drills periodically in the Mt. Baldy area and one of every four post meetings is devoted to search and rescue technical training, he said.

"Most Explorer programs are directed toward vocational interests," Podboy said. "We have premed majors, emergency medical technicians and emergency services students. Nine out of 10 of our Explorers are headed in that direction," he added. One of every three local Explorers is a college student, Podboy pointed out.

Fifteen of the Explorers from Post 359 have become fully qualified as team members. These team members live in Ontario, other cities in the West End and Fullerton, Claremont, Lytle Creek and Fontana.

"This is the only place this program is offered," Podboy noted. It takes nine months of training and a year-long probationary period to make the team.

Each team member must be certified yearly, passing both written and weekend field tests.

The training sessions during the year include navigation, search methods, survival, orientation and physical workouts, he said.

The team was unable to participate in any local search and rescue operation until being certified. But certification is complete and "we are ready now," Podboy said.

"Basically, we are a support group. In no more than two hours we can be any place locally," he said.

The group is coeducational and consists of an information unit equipped to handle any type of disaster. The information unit is responsible for going into a disaster area, mapping the disaster points, routes into and out of the area and potential hazards.

The local ESAR would then provide completed maps and information to any agency requesting them, including the public, fire and police departments and the Red Cross.

The information unit also works alongside the search and rescue team during emergency operations, Podboy noted.

Requirements for joining the team include an interest in search and rescue work, Podboy said. Potential members must also be Explorers in the Old Baldy Boy Scout Council

One drawback in the program is the cost to participants. It can be expensive for those who are not already equipped with a variety of camping gear, he said.

The fire department provides the post with six advisers, including one paramedic and another person currently being schooled as a paramedic

The post meets every Thursday night at 7:30 p.m. in Central School, 415 E. G St., Ontario.

"Search and rescue doesn't pay monetarily, but it pays in satisfaction," Podboy, a premed student,

Explorer Scout Post 359, sponsored by the Ontario Firefighters Association, has the only "official" search and rescue team in Southern California — and maintaining expertise in the methods of rescue operations is one of the primary requirements for that official sanction. In a training session, Wes Podboy, left, emergency services coordinator; Debbie Coccia, right; and Anne Manning practice first aid skills near the south fork of Lytle Creek after setting up a mock drill.

After comforting and rendering first aid to their make-believe victim, upper photo, members of the Explorer Search and Rescue team carry her out of the rugged terrain where the group practices. The team, sponsored by the Ontario

Firefighters Association, currently has 15 members and a waiting list of more than 30. The group was just recently issued official sanction by the National Mountain Rescue Association in Washington and Oregon.

Mapmaking, plotting, navigation and compass work involve a great deal of training since new methods are being devised almost daily, according to Wes Podboy, a member of the Explorer

Search and Rescue team. Here, members of the team work with a map to locate the most likely spot where a hiker would have been injured in the south fork area of Lytle Creek.

In a shoe store that specializes in service and quality children's shoes, the alert mother will see that the shoe fitter completes two specific activities before he attempts to fit shoes on the child's

The first step is the prefitting analysis, which is a check to understand how your child wears his shoes and to get an understanding as to the type of shoe that is desired.

The next step - that of foot measurement - is too often misunderstood by parents and by the novice shoe fitter.

You'll note that we speak in terms of foot measurement. You'll recall from past experience in buying shoes that foot measurement and shoe measurement aren't necessarily the same thing, for a multitude of rea-

Generally, most American manufacturers "size" their shoes by the same standards of length and width. Yet, there are literally hundreds of different lasts being used. (Lasts are the wooden forms over which a shoe is built and they vary considerable in shape. A 2C on one last may be closer to a 11/2-D on another manufacturer's last. In fact, it is not unusual for the variance to be as much as a full size or width.)

There are many fine measureing devices, but the parent should remember that these device will not determine the size shoe that your child will wear. The fitter will use these devices merely as a guide to select the most proper size for your child. A fitter's experience, you will quickly realize, is far more important than any fitting device. To repeat, he is measuring the foot and then will make mental interpretation to convert that measurement to a multitude of different shoe measurements.

Certainly, you've run into that shoe store employee that only wants to measure the right foot. This is a sure sign of inexperience or a lifetime of incorrect fitting. These people are called "shoe clerks" and shouldn't be confused with the competent "shoe fitter. It is a statistical fact that in about 82 percent of the time, the right foot is shorter than the left. Therefore, measurement of the right foot only could lead to shoes that are too small Without going into the physiological reasons that cause it, the following figures are noteworthy and reliable as to foot sizes:

· About 95% of all people have left and right feet that are different sizes.

· About 90% of all right-handed people have harger left feet. The reverse is true of left-handed people. · About 91% of the total population is right - handed. While foot measurement is only a guide to correct fit, it is imperative that the fitter check both feet. This will immeasurably increase the probability of perfect fitting shoes for your young A final word to the parent: Don't place too much importance on the measurement part of shoe fitting. Above all, don't let yourself be impressed by measurement gimmicks Measurement can only be meaningful to the shoe fitter and it has taken great experience to make it so

Solar heating brochure topic

Investing in sunshine as a direct source of energy is a costly venture, but it can pay off in lower utility bills and increased property values, according to Bank of America consumer information report on solar heating systems.

"Solar Energy! Uses for Your Home" is the 15th in a series of money management and information reports published by the bank for its customers and other consumers. Copies are available without charge at all Bank of America branches.

You may see fuel savings immediately after your solar energy system is installed," says the report which cautions, "It will probably be some time before your accumulated savings equal the amount of the system's cost.'

Payback rates depend on many factors including weather conditions, family heating needs, and future cost of gas and oil.

The report explains how solar energy systems work and outlines financing methods and factors to take into consideration when selecting equipment.

Two basic types of systems are outlined in the report - "Active" and "passive."

In active solar energy systems, heat from the sun is absorbed in collectors and transferred to storage either by air or by fluids such as water and antifreeze. If air is used, rock bins store the heat; if fluids are used, the heat is stored in water tanks

Active systems can be built into a new home during construction or existing homes can be re-equipped but "because of the hardware these systems use, they probably will require more maintenance than passive systems," the report states.

Passive systems do not use mechanical devices requiring auxiliary power. Specially designed. elements - such as attached greenhouses, glass + covered heat - absorbing walls or double - paned windows that face south allow the house to act as its own collector. This system relies on the natural movement of heat and on manual controls such as dampers.

Columbia River water could prevent drought

By Kenneth Hahn

There is enough water going into the ocean and being lost from the Columbia River, which runs along the Washington - Oregon border, to irrigate land to feed 80 million people more than one - third the population of the United States

Excess water from the Columbia River can be used to help meet the water and food needs of the next century and to prevent any furture drought in western America.

Nutrition experts from the Department of State's Agency for International Development expect a major food shortage in South America by 1985 and there are predictions of a world famine by the year 2,000.

America now has time to prepare during our country's years of plenty. If we don't, the world will have years of famine.

We must wisely use the land and water of America. Every day, 174 billion gallons - worth $37 billion a year - flows into the Pacific Ocean and is wasted from the Columbia River. That is 7 billion gallons an hour, 121 million gallons a minute and 2 million gallons a second.

More water flows out of the Columbia River and is lost in an hour than all of Southern California uses in a day. It is outrageous for millions of citizens, living under drought conditions, to worry about brushing their teeth and watering their lawns when billions of gallons are being wasted.

In fact, the state of Washington has too much water and the present flooding is causing a dis-billion gallons per day) of is produced today. the water being wasted out would irrigate 26 million acres of the 45 million same as adding a new tillable acres in California, Arizona, Nevada and perhaps Baja California to feed 80 million people from land that is now productive. The surplus water would irrigate barren unproductive desert areas presently only used by motorcycle

The entire Southwest United States could be turned into a bread basket to feed America and the world and Columbia River water could eliminate drought conditions for the next 100

An ample supply of water would be available to expand and build new injobs. There would be processing plants for the food, which also would create jobs.

The unemployment situation is a crisis with more than one million of the seven million people in Los Angeles County receiving some form of public assistance, and unemployment in Watts at 40 percent.

In California, the total water use now is 32.3 billion gallons a day (27.8 billion for agriculture and 4.5 billion for residential and industrial). California presently grows enough food to feed 50 million peo-

Hunger exists in many parts of the world today and there is threatening disaster of the worldwide famine. This can be prevented, according to the Smithsonian Institute, by growing three times more

World population is exof the Columbia River ploding. It is growing by 78 million people a year - the France and New York every year.

> President Carter has issued several official warnings to the American people to conserve energy and save the nation's natural resources, including oil and water. It is wasteful, wrong and extravagant to dump fresh water, coming from the rivers of the United States, into the ocean.

Historically, one state doesn't want to share wasted water it can't use with another state because of the fear water rights need to be protected. Sometimes, one section of a state will refuse to share its dustrial plants to create excess water with another area of the same state. This storage facilities and attitude must be changed to meet the challenges ahead and to prevent worldwide starvation.

Some of the Columbia River water could go to aqueduct with the northern Mexico to revitalize the part of California's existing economy there and reduce water system. the problem of un-United States.

We presently are giving inadequate attention to the needs of Mexico and the fact economic conditions must be improved before the problem of undocumented aliens will be

Technology to use wasted Columbia River water is available. The Alaska pipeline is 798 miles long and was built to bring oil from Prudhoe Bay, Alaka. The pipeline was built through ice, snow, sleet, freezing temperatures, huge mountains and uninhabited areas. It is approximately 375 miles from the Columbia River to the start of California's water system at Shasta Lake. Several aqueduct systems are possible. One is to connect the Columbia River by plan which called for a link between the Columbia River and Shasta Lake. It also had 900 miles of canals extending to Lake Mead. His proposal would have moved 11.5 billion gallons a day of surplus Columbia River water - twice the current use of Southern California.

Another idea, which was suggested in 1963 by the Department of Interior, was to connect the Snake River at Thousand Springs near Hagerman, Idaho, with the Colorado River at Lake Mead.

The Snake River feeds into the Columbia River. Thus its flow is included in the wasted water going into the Pacific at Astoria, Oregon, from the mouth of the Columbia. In 1963, this project would have cost $1.5 billion and would have delivered more than 2 billion gallons of water a day - more than the total water used in Los Angeles County There have been several other studies made, including one presented in 1963 by Samuel Nelson, then director of the Los Angeles City Department of Water and Power

It would have linked the Snake and Colorado rivers and ultimately would have saved 13 billion gallons of water a day - twice the amount presently used in Southern California.

I plan to introduce a resolution before the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors asking President Carter and Congress to have the Bureau of Reclamation of the Department of Interior and the Army Corps of Engineers develop programs for using water wasted from the Columbia River.

(Hahn is a Los Angeles County Supervisor.)

Tips ease visit to veterinarian

By Robert L. Stear, D.V.M. Manager of Veterinary Services Norden Laboratories

Large dogs, nervous cats, concerned pet owners and a sprinkling of children these are only some of the clients that gather in a veterinarian's waiting room. Proper advance preparation can make your stay in the waiting room a brief one and your visit with the veterinarian more productive. Although your veterinarian may offer specific suggestions, here are a few general hints for pet owners regarding office

Certain medical procedures require more time than others, and you call will allow office staff to plan their workday accordingly. You should also mention the number of pets you plan to bring with you. The veterinarian may need to order additional vaccine or other medication to accommodate an extra litter of kittens or puppies.

Swarms, wings: termite signs

By Dr. Carl Koehler Agricultural Extension University of California

Recently a number of homeowners have expressed concern about swarms of strange insects flying around their homes. They have described them as being about 3/8-inch long including wings, dark-brown to brownish-black with smoke-gray wings. Other homeowners reported finding little piles of insect wings on window sills, but did not see any insects.

The swarming insects are subterranean termites, common in California. which invade homes and destroy wood.

At certain times each year, on a warm sunny day after a substantial rain, some males and females from a colony of termites grow wings and fly to different locations where they mate, shed wings, build nests, and develop new colonies. The other wingless - members of the old colony remain in the old

Swarming termites are definite proof that a colony is nearby but does not necessarily mean that damage is being done in the home. If pieces of wood are strewn or buried beneath the house during construction, the insects will feed on those and may not attempt to attack wood in the home until the supply is ex-

Finding large numbers of wings inside the house, however, is usually evidence of infestation in the home. Homeowners should have a thorough inspection made by a licensed pest control operator to locate and control the pests before they do costly

A do-it-yourself job seldom is good enough because the termites are difficult to find since they work on the wood from the inside, and travel through tubes as far as 20 feet or more. Also, it is a messy job as a person would have to crawl through cramped spaces and dirty places.

Fireplace loses heat

We are using our down air flow fireplace this winter to save on our heating bills. How much of a saving do you think we will experience?

You will probably not notice any appreciable savings in your heating bills. Most fireplaces are lmerely decorative and lose as much as 80 percent of the heat up the chimney, radiating the remaining heat only a few feet.

Natural convection causes the hot air to go up the chimney. Some experts suspect that it may also draw up heated air from other sources in your home, such as a central heating

You can improve slightly on the efficiency of your fireplace by adding some equipment, such as a glass screen enclosure to cut Edison Co.)

"Father, I'm sorry. I-" "Sorry? Is that all you have to say? Sorry? This is a disgraceful report card. Look at these grades you dare to present to us. An 'A' in biology. Another 'A' in geometry. And look at this, an 'A' in history. Not even an 'A-' but an 'A!' Don't you they're parolees! You still know ... don't you even care what you're doing to your mother and me?'

But, Father, just yesterday you said it would be very nice if I could bring home a better report card.'

'Yesterday yesterday. Today is today! Yesterday, I wanted 'A's. Today I want 'F's. And a lot of them. Look at this! Look at this! An 'A' in English!"

A second method is to install a grating with heat pipes which will circulate some of the warm air back into your room instead of up the chimney. The heat pipes may be equipped with a small electric blower to help circulate the air.

If you're planning to install a new fireplace, look for new models which have features to help recirculate warm air into a room.

However, the basic practice for saving on heating bills is still to keep the thermostat set at 65 degrees during the day and 55 degrees during sleeping hours. Sweaters and warm blankets will do the rest.
